Joined the Order of Holy Cross.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—In the chapel of the Mission of the Holy Cross, of the Protestant Episcopal church, Sixteenth street, at a recent private celebration of the holy communion, in which the bishop of Tennessee, Bishop Huntington of central New York, Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix of Trinity church, Rev. Arthur Ritchie of St. Ignace and Rev. John W. Shackelford of the Church of the Redeemer took part, Rev. James O. Huntington took on himself the vows of the order of the Holy Cross.

The dress of members of the order consists of a black beretta and a long, dark, monkish-looking gown confined at the waist by a black cord passed three times around the the body. From a black string about the neck is suspended a black crucifix. The crucifix worn by Rev. Mr. Huntington was blessed on the altar. When he joined the order he passed through a noviate of two years.

There are but two members of the order in America, Rev. M. Huntington and Rev. R. S. Dodd.

The Mocking Valley Sufferers.

CHICAGO, Dec. 27.—Mark L. Crawford, deputed by the trade assembly of Chicago to visit the Hocking Valley miners, reports that the cause of the trouble lies with imported negroes, Swedes and Poles and not with the regular striking miners. He recommends that the money collected for them here be forwarded to them and also boots and shoes for their use.

Latter Returns From the Latest Shake.

MADRID, Dec. 27.—Later details received concerning the earthquake show that the damage to property and the loss of life were both much greater than at first believed. The provinces of Malaga and Granada were the scenes of the severest disturbance. Several places were partially destroyed. The mayor reports many parts of Alburgueros in ruins and 150 persons are believed to have perished. At Del Rey forty persons were killed. A similar disaster is likewise reported from other towns. Slight shocks from earthquake have been felt in many places in Spain since Thursday.

Death of one of Lima's Liberators.

LIMA, Dec. 27.—Dr. Miriategia, one of the oldest and most distinguished inhabitants of this city, being associated with the declaration of independence, and holding a high position in the Masonic community, died last Tuesday. The government ignored this proceeding and together with several charitable institutions combined, to render honor to the remains of the illustrious citizen.

The collector says he has notified the collectors at Gulf ports, with a view of intercepting the proposed expedition. The secretary of the state has been furnished with a copy of the letter.

An Infernal Machine Found.

EASTON, Pa., Dec. 27.—An infernal machine, found on the Jersey Central railroad track, yesterday, near Westfield, consisted of a square package bound by shawl straps. It was placed near the rail so as to appear to have been accidentally dropped. The track walker found it. The package was so constructed so as to explode if struck a heavy blow. It contained fifty-eight cartridges of dynamite and a lot of No. one giant powder. Had the package not been discovered it would have been struck by the next train and a terrible disaster must have been the result.

A Terrible Accident.

TORONTO, Dec. 27.—Word has been received here of a terrible accident on the Northern railway extension which occurred near Bracebridge two or three days ago. A DISCOURSE

Upon the Spanish Treaty, the Handiwork of Morton and the Pride of the President

Secretary Frelinghuysen Discloses the Whys and the Wherefore of that Work of Art.

A Bank Furnishes Enterprising Thieves ---A Handsome Christmas Gift--- Chicago Election Fraud.

That Treaty.

WASHINGTON, December 26.—Secretary Frelinghuysen sent a letter to Hon. John F. Miller, chairman of the senate committe on foreign relations, this afternoon, concerning the Spanish treaty. The communication is in answer to an inquiry of Mr. Miller, whether Mr. Frelinghuysen had any suggestions to make in answer to the objections to the treaty, which have been made throughout the country recently. After explaining the origin of the treaty and the impracticability of annexing Cuba to the United States, the secretary says: "In regard to the protests against the treaty, it is said we thereby give up the revenue on sugar from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000, in return for a reduction of the duties upon our products imported into Cuba and Porto Rico, as estimated on a basis of the existing traffic, at from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

"The relinquishment of the revenue when for public good is in line, the national policy hitherto was, as was done in the case of tea and coffee, which by the act of May 1st, 1872, were placed upon the free list without an attempt to obtain therefore any equivalent whatever, and solely in obedience to popular demand for 'free breakfast tables.' By the measure the treasury of the United States has lost in the last twelve years revenue some $144,000,000 on coffee alone, and, besides, let us not forget that Brazil availed itself of the action of this government to impose an export tax upon coffee, which deprived the people of this country of the benefits of our tariff reduction. Article 5, of this convention, prevents a similar action by Spain. The treaty now under consideration intends to cheapen the cost of the necessaries of life by reducing the cost of staple daily consumption of which we are obliged to import each year nearly $100,000,000 in value, to make up for the inadequate production of our own sole, which amounts to only about 12 per cent of the whole consumption; and at the same time we secure a growing market for products in the Spanish Antilles, coupled with especial privileges to our merchant marine. It is also said the importation free of sugar from Cuba and Porto Rico, when added to our domestic production and to the importation from the Sandwich Islands, will fall short of the quantity needed for home consumption, and the price will be ruled by that of the part remaining liable to duty, so that the profit from the removal of the duty will go to Cuban and Porto Rico planters and not to the consumers of this country. If this argument is true, the treaty will not affect the price of sugar in Louisiana. The price of this commodity is lessened by the supply being greater than the demand, but it is frank to say that other conventions are being negotiated or are in process of negotiation, and which will provide an adequate importation from sugar regions. Again the introduction of tobacco has been objected to as reducing the revenue and removing the protection from American producers and manufacture. As to this it seems enough to say that the convention leaves a discrimination against the imported articles from four to five times the internal revenue duties of American products and insures a market before denied to the special manufactures of tobacco in which we excel and which we demand a profitable market. Wherever the importation is permitted a reduction is urged in many quarters, of the internal revenue tax on the manufacture of tobacco, and this would be a loss of some $25,000,000 annually to the public treasury. This treaty, taken with others of the same character, stimulates our general exports and thereby promotes the interest of our manufactures. Again it is urged that the increased importation which these treaties may secure will not equal the loss of revenue on the imported articles; but these articles of import are produced within our territory sparingly or not at all, or of different grades not satisfying the public, and it is the essence of wise protection to forego the duties upon these and to impose them upon those manufactures, which may be profitably fostered by any impeding foreign competition. Not only these conventions do this, but they enlarge the foreign market for our surplus production, which is the policy of protection to secure, and they stimulate our commercial relations and our carrying trade by reserving to our vessels the enjoyment of privileges conceded. Again your attention is drawn to articles xx and xxi, establishing such a guarantee of personal treatment as will insure safety to the interests of our citizens."

Secretary Frelinghuysen then says of the argument that the treaty is invalid, is for the reason that the measure did not originate in the house and is not based on facts. The first step was to make an appropriation to defray the expenses of concluding a treaty.

The letter concludes: "The only object which the executive has had in view in negotiations with the conventions now awaiting the action of congress has been to the best interest of the republic and in endeavoring to realize this, the intinentions of the purposes and desires of congress have served as a guide. The action of he executive, so taken, is in every case to be subject to the decision of the senate and representatives of the people. I do not doubt the result aimed at will be reached. If the Spanish treaty does not meet the approval of the legislative branch of the government the representatives of the people cannot fail to remedy it.

Amicably Settled.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., December 26.—A very brief interview with P. M. Arthur, chief engineer of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers this afternoon elicited the information that he had been in consultation with the grievance committee all morning, but he would give no information as to what they had done. They stated, however, that he and the executive committee of the general grievance committee would have a conference with Col. Hoxie in the afternoon, and if any result was reached he would make a statement for publication.

In an interview to-night, J. H. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the grievance committee, stated that Grand Chief Arthur and the executive committee of the general grievance committee had a conference this afternoon with Colonel Hoxie, and after the presentation of their grievance and a full and frank discussion of the whole matter, Hoxie stated the agreement made, in 1882 should be faithfully carried out. This was entirely satisfactory to the engineer and all danger of any trouble of any kind is past. The agreement referred to was made two years ago between the engineers and Col. A. A. Talmage, who was then general manager of the Gould system and provides in part, that the engineers of passenger trains shall receive three and a half cents per mile, and one hundred miles shall be a days work, and the engineers of freight trains shall receive four cents per mile and one hundred miles or less to be a days work.

The Investigation of the Chicago Election Frauds.

CHICAGO, December 26.—About fifty prominent citizens met to-day to consult in regard to further prosecution of the investigation into the recent election frauds in the Eighteenth ward. Numerous speeches urging the necessity of pushing the inquiry to a limit were made. A. H. Day, of the citizen's sub-committee of five, said substantial progress was being made, and that the committee was then at work on an important clue. Murray Nelson said the thing necessary was money. He would subscribe $600 and would pledge the last dollar he owed if necessary. M. E. Stone, editor of the Daily News, said the committee of five had evidence that rendered it certain that Gallagher's tally sheet and that Gallagher, Mackin and one other person, who was known, had stuffed the ballot box with the fraudulent ballots.

He could convince any three of those present if desired that this statement was true. Mr. Stone went on to say that the present county grand jury had begun an investigation of these frauds for no other purpose, he believed, than to defeat the ends of justice. The sum of $6,500 was subscribed to push the investigation.

Bold Burglars.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—One of the boldest attempts at robbery that has happened in the city for some months past occurred Thursday morning between 8 and 9 o'clock in the Commercial National bank building, at the corner of Dearborn and Monroe streets. It being Christmas morning, the various offices in the building had been closed and locked for the day, and save for the presence of the janitors, were unguarded. At 8 o'clock the head janitor made his usual round of the floors, and saw that everything was secure. About an hour later he returned to the upper floors, and while ascending the stairway was passed by a small, thick-set man in a pea jacket and fur cap, with dark complexion and dark mustache. The janitor stopped to look at the man as the latter descended, but concluding that he had been in search of some occupant of the building continued on his way to the upper floors On approaching rooms No. 20 and 28, occupied respectively by Grape Creek Coal company and the Willmington Star Mining company, he saw that the doors of both offices were open. On entering the office of the Star Mining company the work of burglars was at once apparent. Desks had been moved from their places, the drawers pulled out and rifled of their contents, valuable papers were thrown upon the floor, and the room presented a scene of wild confusion. The doors of both offices had been cleverly opened with a "jimmy," and so skillfully done as to save the doubt of its being the work of an expert. In the office of the Grape Creek coal company the cashier's drawer had been broken open and despoiled of its contents; which, however, amounted to but little. Manager H. H. McClure's desk had also been rifled and its contents thrown upon the floor. No mail was found in the office and as the company invariably receive each morning a heavy mail, containing remittances at greater or less valu, it is believed that the raid was by parties no unsuccessful one. The evening mail of the Star mining company was found just inside the door where the postman had dropped it, and probably escaped the notice of the intruder. Both vaults were found intact and securely locked, no attempt so far as could be seen having been made to force an entrance, beyond the probable loss of valuable letters belonging to the Grape Creek company, it is thought that nothing has been taken.

A CHILD!

TALLODTON, GA., Sept. 12, 1884.—My little son, now seven years old, broke out when a babe three weeks with what the doctors called eczema, log owing on the head and gradually spreading over his whole body. He was treated for five years or more by various physicians without relief, and the little boy's health was completely broken down. About a year ago I was induced to use on him Swift's Specific, and two bottles cured him sound and well, and there has been no sign of a return of the disease.

Poisoned by a Nurse.

Some eight years ago I was inoculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. The little child lingered along until it was about two years old, when its little life was yielded up to the fearful poison. For six long years I have suffered untold misery. I was covered with sores and a curse from head to foot, and in my great extremity I prayed to die. No language can express my feelings of woe during these long six years. I had the best medical treatment. Several physicians unsuccessfully treated me, but all to no purpose. The Mercury and Potash seemed to add fuel to the awful flame which was devouring me. About three months ago I was advised by Swift's Specific to gain relief. It gave me instant relief, and I commenced to improve. Just as soon as I had spent so much for medicine I commenced the treatment that we were too poor to buy. Oh! no agony of that moment! Health and happiness within my reach at last to pay for it. I applied, however, to those who were willing and able to help me, and I have taken Swift's Specific, and am now sound and well once more. Swift's Specific is the best blood purifier in the world, and it is the greatest blessing of the age. MRS. T. W. LEE, Greenville, Ala.

SSS

A Druggist for 25 Years.

AUBURN, Ala., Sept. 8, 1884.—I am an old pharmacist, and have had to do largely with blood diseases for over twenty five years. I have dealt in all kinds of blood purifiers, and do not hesitate to say that Swift's Specific is the best and has given general satisfaction. I have used it in cases of scrofula. Lastly, near a student came to my store emaciated and covered with sores. I recommended S. S. S. He took only three bottles, and the sores disappeared, his throat is sized up, and his skin cleared off. His wife was suicide and I think did so, and if his case had existed, two pounds. I scarcely knew him when he returned after an absence of several weeks. He claimed to be restored in body and spirit. A number of other cases less malignant have come under my observation, and all with the best results. Swift's Specific is an excellent tonic, and as an antidote for malaria has no superior. Blood taint we believe it as a tonic for general debility, and find it the most satisfactory unpower used. I have been dead as in Swift's Specific for over a decade, and am satisfied that I do not place too high an estimate upon its merit. C. W. DIXON.

Swift's Specific is entirely vegetable and skin diseases treated free. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

Neuralgia's Big Brother

Neuralgia means nerve-pain. There are in the human system nerves of many kinds and of great variety of sizes. Each nerve has its own function, and each its own particular work to do.

In the leg, running downward from the hip, is the great Sciatic Nerve, which, with its branches, carries telegraphic messages from the brain, through the hip, to the extremities of the toes. When the Sciatic Nerve is affected, you have SCIATICA.

SCIATICA is one of the worst and most gigantic forms of nerve-pain or neuralgia. You may with comparative patience worry through an attack of neuralgia in face or head. That is bad enough, but when Sciatica seizes you, you are helpless.

There are various forms of Sciatica. People speak of Rheumatic Sciatica, Sciatic Rheumatism, Sciatic Neuralgia, and all that sort of thing. Call it what you please, it is the disorder of this great Sciatic Nerve. There is just one thing that will stop it.

That one thing is ATHLOPHOROS. It neutralizes that vicious condition of the blood which causes the mischief. In a word, it conquers the whole family of rheumatic and neuralgic ailments. Working quickly, pleasantly and thoroughly, it leaves no evil effects.

If you cannot get ATHLOPHOROS of your druggist, we will send it express paid on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We do not like that you buy it from your druggist, but if he hasn't it (or will not get it) we prefer to fill the order ourselves, but either at once from us as directed.

J. G. Steinheiser, Superintendent of the Lancaster Co., Pa., hospital, writes: "I used it in a great many cases of dyspepsia, kidney disease, liver complaint, rheumatism, nothing, and scrofula, and invariably with best results."

F. Hoffman, of Circleville, Ohio, says: "This is to certify that I have had the chills and fever, and under one bottle of Mishler's Herb Bitters I consider myself entirely cured. I have also been troubled with Rheumatism, Sick Headache, Constipation and Kidney Complaint, and I can say that Mishler's Herb Bitters has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took in my life."

OFFICIAL PAPER OF COUNTY AND CITY.

OPEN

Discourses Upon Current Topics, of the Offices, How They are Disposed of and Their Relative Information to Office Seekers.

Special correspondence of THE SENTINEL.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 25, 1884.

The topics now most discussed here are the Nicaragua treaty, the new cabinet and the disposition of the federal offices.

THE NICARAGUA SCHEME.

The feeling in regard to the Nicaragua treaty is very favorable and it will be ratified if the term of the present congress does not elapse. There is no telling what the next congress will do, however, if the matter is not disposed of by this congress. The southern representatives are strongly in favor of the canal scheme and the army and navy are unanimous in favor of it. Not because they see in the proposed ditch a commercial advantage to our merchant marine, but because of their belief that England would view the construction of the canal as a dissolution of Clayton-Bulwer treaty and thus entangle the two nations in a war. There is no doubt that the army is spoiling for a war in order to secure promotion among the officers and revive the martial spirit of the nation, which has been extinguished by the greed of our people to make money. Not only the army and navy and the British tail-twisters are in favor of the canal, but such conservatives as Senators Edmunds and Bayard are extending its construction and if the treaty can be considered this session it will be ratified regardless of consequences.

THOSE WHO WANT OFFICE.

A gentleman connected with the executive chamber at Albany, who was in the city to arrange for the accommodation of Cleveland at the inauguration, says that about twenty-five thousand applications for offices have been received by the governor, coming from foreign missions to letter carriers. But 90 per cent. of the applications are for places that the president has no direct control of, being appointed by heads of departments and other subordinate officers. It would seem, too, that these letters that the applicants imagine that all the offices are located at Washington.

There are about 100,000 civil appointments and not more than 25,000 are at the seat of the government, the other offices being distributed among the states and territories, of which 48,434 are postmasters; 40,000 in the railway mail service; 4,000 in the internal revenue service and the rest distributed among the diplomatic and consular service, custom service, Indian agencies, etc. There are 12,000 clerks under the civil service rules, of which 5,052 are in the departments at Washington, 5,699 in the large city post offices and 2,573 in the custom houses. From this it will be seen that about 70,000 offices are outside the rules, which Mr. Cleveland can fill with democrats without violating the rules.

The states having custom houses like New York, California, Louisiana and Pennsylvania and such states as Kentucky, where a large quantity of whisky is distilled and tobacco manufactured, a large force of enders, surveyors of customs and other employes of the government are appointed.

INDIANA OFFICIALS.

The patronage of Indiana is more limited. There are 93 post offices paying from $1,000 to $35,000 per year; 97 from $500 to $1,000 and several hundred from $100 to $500.

By an act of March 3, 1883 the salaries of post masters are readjusted. The post offices are now divided into four classes, viz:

First class—Gross receipts from $40,000 to $60,000, salary from $4,000 to $6,000, except New York, which is $8,000.

Second class—Gross receipts from $8,000 to $10,000, salary from $2,000 to $2,900.

Third class—Gross receipts from $1,000 to $8,000, salary from $1,000 to $1,900.

Fourth class—Gross, $50, 100 per cent. and 60 per cent. on next $100, and 40 per cent. on all receipts over, except where the total percentage reaches $1,000, when the office becomes a third class office.

The post masters of first, second and third classes offices are appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate. Post masters of fourth class offices are appointed by the post master general.

THE POST OFFICES OF ALLEN COUNTY.

The following are the post offices in Allen county, together with the amount received as salaries, taken from the last official record of post offices, etc: Aboit, $40; Academy, $78; Arcola, $264; Cedarville, $50; Chamberlain, $27; Dawkins, $45; Fort Wayne, $2,000; Garr Creek, $33; Georgetown, $25; Hall's Corners, $40; Harlan, $237; Heller's Corners, $25; Hoagland, $145; Huntertown, $193; Hursh, $22; Kelseyville, $23; Leo, $104; Monroeville, $524; New Haven, $429; Nine Miles, $472; Poe, $78; Root, $19; Shieldon, $177; Wallen, $59; Woodburn, $43, and Zulu $9.

It will be seen that Fort Wayne is the only office where the postmaster is appointed by the president.

There are besides the postmaster at Monroeville a mail messenger who gets $900 a year and an assistant postmaster at Fort Wayne at $1,440, three clerks at $780, one at $900, two at $720, eight mail carriers at $850, one at $600 and one transfer agent at $1,150.

There are a great many postal clerks running through Indiana which cannot be called local offices. At Fort Wayne two are running to Cincinnati, one at $1,000 and one at $800.

At Lafayette there are forty postal clerks running to St. Louis and Quincy, Ill., getting from $900 to $1,300 a year; eight at Terre Haute, running to Peoria and Evansville, at $800 to $1,000 a year; twelve at Evansville, running to St. Louis, Nashville, Cairo, Mt. Vernon and Bowling Green, at $720 to $1,000 a year: twenty-four at Indianapolis, running to Louisville, Peoria, Vincennes, Decatur, Madison, St. Louis and Michigan City, at $800 to $1,300 a year; two at Cambridge City, running to Madison, at $1,000 each; five at Muncie, running to Bloomington, at $1,000 each, and nineteen at Logansport, running to St. Louis, Louisville, Peoria, Vincennes, Decatur and Madison.

There are three collectors of internal revenue at $4,500 each; thirty-four deputies and clerks at from $500 to $1,800; forty-four store keepers at $4 per day; one revenue agent at LaPorte at $6 per day; one surveyor of customs at Evansville at $600 and one at Michigan City at $350; two steamboat inspectors at Evansville at $200; one superintendent of construction each at Evansville, Terre Haute and Fort Wayne at $6 per day; also one foreman at $4 per day; one superintendent of national cemeteries at Crown Hill and New Albany, each $780; thirty quartermasters' clerks and agents at Jeffersonville at $1,000 to $1,800; a pension agent at Indianapolis at $4,000; district attorney, $200 and fees; assistant attorney, $1,000; Marshal, $200 and fees; clerk of courts, fees, and several deputy marshals and clerks and United states commissioners in the important cities of the state, receiving fees. There are no offices in the state protected by the civil service rules, so no classification is made except where fifty or more clerks are employed.

THE SUPPOSED HEIRS.

John Lamb has the inside track for United States district attorney. Eb. Henderson will no doubt get the collectorship of the Indianapolis district and Ed. Hawkins will probably be the next marshal for Indiana. John Shoemaker of the Sentinel wants the Indianapolis post office. Tom Woods, of the Kankakee Mardi district, wants the collectorship of the Kokomo district.

The only patronage at the direct disposal of Governor Hendricks will be a private secretary and a messenger at $2,500 and $1,440, and as president of the senate he will appoint a restaurant keeper who will make all he can, from $5,000 to $10,000 per year, as every thing is furnished him free by the government.

JASON.

Is your system running down? Is there a feeling of decrepitude taking possession of you? Are the functions of your digestive and urinary organs impaired? Is your blood bad? Do sores and pimples trouble you? Do you suffer from aches and pains? Are you weak and does the least exertion give you fatigue? Beware! Regain perfect health by using Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.

Rev. Dennis O'Donovan, a Catholic priest, has brought a $50,000 libel suit against Father Herman Aldering at Indianapolis.

Sparkling eyes, blooming cheeks and light and buoyant step are the outward signs of health and strength. Invalids suffering from kidney or liver troubles, or dyspepsia, can speedily be brought to this enviable state by the use of Mishler's Herb Bitters. George Kelly, of Jersey City, whose health had been shattered by a severe case of gravel, was speedily restored to health and strength by the use of this great remedy.

GOULD TALKS.

Jay Gould takes a bright view of the trade situation and an interviewer found him the other evening in the following frame of mind and circumstances:

He sat in his luxuriously furnished reception room of his palatial Fifth avenue mansion last evening and his countenance wore a serene expression. He rested upon a plush upholstered sofa and his slippered feet beat a tattoo upon an immense leopard skin. He was asked by the correspondent if he would express his views as to the present condition of business and the outlook for the future. He announced his willingness.

"Why is the business world so depressed?" he was asked.

"For various reasons. One is that we pass through just such periodical depressions at least every ten years. At such times it is to be expected that stocks will go below their normal value. Then Wall street wakes up to a famine in stocks, starts a bull movement and carries them just so far the other way. I think the indications are that we are now down to hard pan. The railroads are not making a good showing, because the war has been the means of reducing the rates to such a figure that the competing lines are compelled to do business at less than the cost of operation. Again, the season about the period of a presidential election is always one of despondency. The prospects of a change of administration cause a great many enterprises to hesitate. Business men are uncertain as to the policy of any incoming administration, and they fear to make ventures. This feeling of apprehension, I believe, however, is passing away. The fears of a change in the tariff system also seems to be growing less marked, because labor is getting down to European prices. Again, the beginning of a new year is almost upon us. At such a time business firms desire to call a halt and take an inventory of their stock and start afresh."

"Do you believe the outlook for business is an encouraging one?"

"Most certainly I do. I believe that after January 1 we shall begin a new era. I think that the year of 1885 will be a money-making year. The balance of trade of the world is now in our favor. Foreign nations are buying of us more than we are buying of them. They are paying us the difference in hard gold coin. Millions of this reaches us on every incoming steamer."

SATURDAY, DEC. 27, 1884.

ILLUMINATION.

The Cry of the People is: "Give us Light! Give us Light!"

From the Throne of God the King of Heaven and Earth

Comes Into the Dungeons of Our Sin and Suffering.

A Message of Pardon, of Love, of Sympathy, of Comfort, of Eternal Life.

Dr. Talmage preached Sunday evening in the Brooklyn Tabernacle on the subject, "Illumination." The opening hymn was:

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Hath He laid for your faith in His excellent word."

After expounding appropriate passages of Scripture Dr. Talmage gave out the text from Psalm cxix., 105: Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path."

DARKNESS AND LIGHT.

From 6 o'clock last evening, said Dr. Talmage, until 6 o'clock this morning darkness rested over our part of earth, and every few hours there rolls a wave of natural night all over the nations. With lamps and chandeliers, and torches and lanterns we try to drive out the night from our houses, and churches, and stores, and shops. He who invents a new kind of light invents his own fortune and the fortune of his children. But there is a night of sin, and suffering, and shame, which needs another kind of illumination. Ancient philosophy made a lamp, but it was a dead failure, and the people kept crying out, "Give us light! Give us light!" After a while a prophet, and evangelist, and apostle, made a lamp. A coal from heaven struck it into a blaze, and uncounted multitudes of people, with an open bible before them, cry out in rapture and in love, "Thy Word is a lamp!"

When some years ago, there was a great accident in Hartley colliery, England, and two hundred persons lost their lives, the queen telegraphed down to the scene of disaster: "Can we give you any help? Will you be able to get the men out? How many are lost? Give my sympathy to all the bereft." What consolation it was to the families who stood amid the consternation and the terror that the throne of England throbbed in sympathy with their disaster! But I have to tell you a more glorious truth, and that is: From the throne of God the King of heaven and earth telegraphed down through this bible into the dungeons of our sin and suffering a message of pardon, of love, of sympathy, of eternal life. Like some light-house on high promontory, blessed by ships passing through darkness and storm, so on the heights of God's love and grace there flames forth a light upon the great sea of man's wretchedness and of God's providence, so that angels on their way earthward, and ransomed spirits on their way heavenward, and devils on their way hellward, pass through its flash, crying, "Thy Word is a lamp."

THE WIDOW AND THE BIBLE.

You have four or five bibles in your house—perhaps two, perhaps twenty—they are each common property you do not appreciate them. If you had only one bible and for that you had paid $500, the price that was paid in olden times for a copy of the Scriptures, then you would more thoroughly appreciate it. I was once a colporteur for a few months in a vacation, and I came into a home of destitution. I saw a woman there eighty-five years of age, and I said to her: "May I give you a bible?" "Oh," she replied, "a bible would be of no use to me; I can't see to read. I used to read but for twenty years I haven't been able to read a word." I pulled out of my satchel one of the copies of the Psalms of David and the New Testament in great large round type, and I said: Now put on your spectacles and see if you can't read this." She wiped her spectacles and put them on. "Oh, yes," she said; why I can see after all. I am very thankful to you. Why, yes, I see it; I love the Lord because he hath heard my voice and my—; oh, yes, I can read it! I can read it! I wish that God to-night would make the bible as new and fresh to us as it was to her.

I want to show you that the bible is a lamp—a parlor lamp, a store lamp, a church lamp, a sepulchral lamp. In parlors all afiash with gas light and gleaming mirror and blazing chandelier and candelabra, there may be Egyptian darkness; while in some plain room which a frugal hand has spread with hospitality and refinement, this one lamp may cast a glow that makes it more than heavenly coronations. We invoke no shadow to fall upon the hilarities of life. We would not have every song a dirge and every picture a martyrdom and every step a funeral pace. God's lamp hung in the parlor would still no joy, would send no harmony, would check no innocent laughter. On the contrary, it would bring out brighter colors in the picture; it would expose new gracefulness in the certain; it would unroll new wreaths from the carpet; it would strike new music from the harp; it would throw new polish onto the manners; it would kindle with light borrowed from the throne of God all the refinements of society. Oh, that the Christ who was born in a barn would come to our parlor! We need His hand to lift the parlor music. We need His taste to assort the parlor literature. We need His voice to conduct the parlor conversation. We are apt to think of religion as being a rude, blundering thing, not fit to put its foot upon Axminster or its clumsish hands on beautiful adornments, or lift its voice amid the artistic and refined; so, while we have Jesus in the nursery when we teach our children to ask His blessing upon our food, and Jesus in the sitting room when we have family prayers, it is a simple fact that from ten thousand Christian homes in this country Christ is from one end of the year to the other shut out of the parlor. Oh, that housekeepers understood that the grace of God is the greatest accomplishment, and that no sent is too luxurious for religion to sit in, and no arch too grand for religion to walk under, and no circle too brilliant for religion to move in! If Christianity at last is to walk up the heads of heaven with seraphins and archangle it is good enough to go anywhere where you go or where I shall go. To purify the heart, to cleanse the life, to culture the taste, to expurgate all hypocrisy and falsehood and sham we must have the bible in the parlor. When Christian people come to spend an evening they talk about the weather, and they talk about the scandal, and they talk about the crops, and they talk about the markets; but they do not talk about God and Christ and heaven. The thing we most want in all our parlors is the lamp of the bible.

THE BIBLE A STREET LAMP.

Still further the bible is the street lamp. When night comes down on the city, crime goes forth to its worst achievements. Not only to show honest citizens where to walk, but to hinder the burglar and assassin and highwayman and pickpocket we must have artificial lights all over the city. I remember what consternation there was in Philadelphia when one night the gas works were out of order, and the whole city sat in darkness. Between 11 o'clock at night and 3 o'clock in the morning in the dark and unlighted places of the town crime has its holiday. If the lamp lighter ceased his work for one week the town would rot. But there is a darkness beyond all power of gas light. What is the use of police station and almshouse and watchman's club if there be no moral and religious influence to sanction the law and to purify the executive, and to hang over legal enactment the fear of God and an enlightened public opinion. When in a city crime runs rampant and virtue is at a discount, and jails are full and churches are empty, and the nights are hideous with the howl and whoop of drunkards, and the saloons boil over with scum, and public officials think more of a bribe than they do of their own conscience, and when great tides of wickedness set down the streets—the first want of such a city as that is the street lamp of the bible. Did you ever stand in a church tower and look down upon a city at night? It is overwhelming. But you feel that beneath all that brilliancy of gas light there is a surging sea of want and suffering and woe. History says that Dionysius had a great cave built for his prisoners. He was a cruel man, and he used to go to the top of the cave, put his ear to the opening, and listen, and the groans and the sighings of the prisoners came up to his ear and made music for him. God stands at the head of our world, but for a different purpose, and with a different heart. He puts his ear to the dungeon, and every sigh comes up stirring his sympathies and every groan wounding his heart; and he listens and listens all night long. There is but one lamp that can throw light into the dungeon where the prisoner groans, into the hovel where the beggar pines, into the cellar where the drunkard wallows, into the alley where the libertine patrolles, into the mad house, where the maniac raves. Travelers in Africa tell us they have seen serpents—a vast number of them coiled together, and piled up in horrid fold above horrid fold; and then they would hear hundreds of them hissing at once, and the sight and the sound were appalling and unbearable. But if you should take the wickedness of our best of cities, and bring it all together in one place and pile it up, fold above fold, it would be a hissing horror and ghastliness that no human eye could look at without being blasted and no human ear could hear without being stunned.

THE POWER OF THE BIBLE.

Now, how will all these scenes of inquity be overcome? They will not be overcom until the church and the school and Christian printing press kindle all around about us God's street lamps of the Bible. Send the bible down that filthy alley, if you would have it cleansed; send it against those decanters, if you would have them smashed; send it against those chains if you would have them broken; send it through all the ignorance of the city, if you would have it illuminated as by a flash from heaven's morning. The Bible can do it, will do it. Gather all the ignorance and the wickedness and the vice of our cities in one great pile—Alps above Alps, Pyrenees above Pyrenees, Himalayas above Himalaya—and then give one little New Testament full swing against thatside of that mountain, and down it would come, Alps after Alps, Pyrenees after Pyrenees, Himalayas after Himalaya. What is the difference between New York and Pekin? What is the difference between London and Madras? What is the difference between Edinburgh and Canton? No difference save that which the Bible makes. O, city missionary! O, philanthropist! O, Christian! Go everywhere. Kindle up these great street lamps of the Gospel, and our city, purified and cleansed, will proclaim what the psalmist so long ago said, that "the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

THE BIBLE THE BEST CHURCH LAMP.

Still further, the Bible is the best church lamp. I care not how many chandeliers there may be in a church, how many brilliant lights there may be, the word of God is the best church lamp. Oh, is there anything more beautiful than an audience gathered on the Sabbath for Christian worship? There may be no dazzle of theatrical assemblage, there may be no glitter of footlights, there may be no allegoric images blossoming upon foot lights, but there is something in the placeand in the occasion that makes it supernatural. In the light of this lamp I see your faces kindle with a great joy. Glorious church lamp, this bible! Luther found it in the cloister at Erfurt, and he lifted it until the monasteries and cathedrals of Germany and Italy and France and England and the world saw the illumination. It shone under the breastplate of sacerdotal authority; and in the mosques of Turkey and in the pagodas of India and in the ice huts of Greenland and in the mud hovels of Africa and in the temples of China, God's regenerated children in musical Tamil and sweet Italian and nasal Chinese and harsh Choctaw eried out: "Thy Word is a lamp." It throws its light on the pulpit, making a bulwark of truth; on the baptismal cup until its waters glitter like the crystals of heaven. It strikes penitence into the prayers and gladness into the thanksgiving. It changes into a church John Bunyan's prison, and Covenanter's cave, and Calvin's castle, and Russ' stake, and Hugh M. Kail's scaffold of martyrdom. Zwingli carried it into Switzerland and Jack Wickliffe into England and John Knox into Scotland and Jehudi Ashmun into Africa.

Begone, ye scoffers! Down to the lowest pit, ye emissaries of darkness! for by the throne of an omnipotent judgment I declare it that all iniquity shall fall, and all bondage be broken, and all wounds be healed, and all darkness be dispelled when God's truth shall go forth "as a lamp that burneth." We want no papers or miners to level the wall; we want no ax man or engineers to prepare the way; we want no glittering steel or booming gun, or howling Hotchkiss shall to get us the victory, for the mountains are full of horses and chariots of fire. Hallelujah! for the kingdoms of this world are to become the kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE BIBLE A SEPULCHRAL LAMP.

Still further, the Bible is a sepulchral lamp. You know that the ancient Egyptians used to keep lights burning in the tombs of their dead. These lights were kept up for scores, even hundreds of years. Friends would come from generation to generation and put oil in the lamps, and it was considered a disaster if those lamps went out. You and I will some day go down into the house of the dead. Some have looked upon it as an unknown land, and when they thought of it their knees have knocked together and their hearts faltered. There were whole communities of men that had no comfort about death, no view of the eternal world; and whenever they brought their friends and put them away into the dust they said, with out any abbreviation: "This is horrid! This is horrid!" And it was. The grave is the deepest, ghastliest pit that a man ever looks into, unless the lamp of God's Word flashes into it. For whole ages men thought that the sepulchral was a den where a great monster gorged himself on human carcasses. "I will put an end to that," said the voice of Nazareth; "I will make Mine own voice go down and and make darkness flee." And as we stepped out from the gate of heaven all the grave-yards of earth cried: "Come! come!" And He came down, bringing a great many beautiful lights; and above this babe's grave He hung a light, and over this mother's tomb He hung a light, and over this wife's grave He hung a light. Then He uttered His voice, and it ran along under the ground from city to city, and along under the sea from continent to continent, until mausoleum and [illegible] were dead, yet shall he live." [illegible] it Gennesaret and Laurel Hill and Mount Auburn could break their beautiful silence and should speak, their lips of bronze and granite would break forth in the strains of my text, "Thy word is a lamp."

O, ye bruised souls! O, ye who have been cutting yourselves among the tombs! O, ye who have been sowing seeds for the resurrection day! O, ye of the broken hearts! I come out to-night and put in your hand this glorious gospel lamp. It will throw a glow of consolation over your bereft spirit. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."

Rabbi Mier went off from home to be gone a few days, and left two beautiful boys. While he was gone the two lads died. Rabbi Mier returned, not knowing that any thing had happened. His christian wife knew he would be overcome with grief, and she met him at the door and said to him: "My husband, I once had two beautiful jewels loaned to me, I had them for a little while. And do you know while you were gone the owner came for them! Ought I to have given them?" "Of course," said Rabbi Mier, "you ought to have given them up; you say they were only loaned." Then she called her husband to the side room and removed the cloth that covered the dead children. After Rabbi Mier had for a few moments given way to his grief, he rose up and said: "Now I know what you meant by the borrowed jewels. The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away. Blessed be the name of the Lord." And so Rabbi Mier was comforted.

Let this sepulchral light gild all the graves of your dead! May this lamp of the text be set in all your parlors, in all your streets, in all your stores, in all your churches, in all your sepulchers! Amen!

When a remedy has proven itself to be a cure for consumption and a perfect lung restorer, it should be kept in every well regulated home. The Best Story of the Season.

Mr. Bartley's views about Mary now began to waver. It occurred to him that should Colonel Clifford die and Walter inherit his estates he could easily come to terms with the young man so passionately devoted to his daughter. He had only to say: "You can make no allowance at present, but I will settle my whole fortune upon Mary and her children after my death, if you'll make a moderate settlement at present," and Walter would certainly fall into this, and not demand accounts from Mary's trustee. So now he would have positively encouraged Mary in her attachment, but one thing held him back a little, he had learned by accident that the last entail of Clifford Hall and the dependent estates dated two generations back, so that the entail expired with Colonel Clifford, and this had enabled the Colonel to sell some of the estates, and clearly gave him power now to leave Clifford Hall as he pleased to his son. Now the people who had begun to fetch and carry tales between the two magnates told him of the lawyer's recent visits to Clifford Hall, and he had some misgivings that the Colonel had been induced by these to alter his will and disinherit, in whole or part, his absent and rebellious son. All this taken together made Mr. Bartley resolve to be kinder to Mary in her love affair than he had ever been, but still to be guarded and cautious.

"Mary, dear," said he, "I am sure you'll be on thorns till this young man comes home; perhaps now would be a good time to pay your visit to Mrs. Easton."

"Oh, papa, how good of you! but it's twenty miles, I believe, to where she is staying at the lakes."

"No, no," said Mr. Bartley; "she's staying with her sister Gilbert, quite within a drive."

"Are you sure, papa?"

"Quite sure, my dear; she wrote to me yesterday about her little pension; the quarter is just due."

"What, do you allow her a pension?"

"Certainly, my dear; or rather I pay her little stipend as before; how surprised you look, Mary! Why, I'm not like that old Colonel, intolerant of other people's views, which they chance them civilly. That woman helped me to save your life in a very great danger, and for many years she has been as careful as a mother, and we are not, so to say, at daggers drawn about Walter Clifford. Why, I only demanded a little privacy and patience with him from you and from her. Now tell me, is there proper accommodation for you in Mrs. Gilbert's house?"

"Oh yes, papa; it is a farm-house now, but it was a grand place. There's a beautiful spare room with an oriel window."

"Well, then you secure that, and write to-day to have a blazing fire, and the bed properly aired as well as the sheets; and you shall go to-morrow in the four-wheel; and you can take her her little stipend with you."

This sudden kindness and provision for her health and happiness filled Mary's heart to overflowing, and her gratitude gushed forth upon Mr. Bartley's neck. The old fox blandly absorbed it, and took the opportunity to say, "Of course to be understood that matters are to go no further between you and Walter Clifford. Oh, I don't mean that you are to make him unhappy, or drive him to despair; only insist upon his being patient like yourself. Everything comes sooner or later to those that can wait."

"Oh, papa," cried Mary, "you've said more to-night to please Mrs. Easton or anybody else, but I hope this change will do me good. I am oh, so grateful!"

So Mary wrote her letter, and went to Mrs. Easton next day. After the usual embraces, she told Mrs. Easton of her letter, and was then installed in the state bedroom. She wrote to Julia Clifford to say where she was; and that was her way of letting Walter Clifford know.

Walter himself arrived at Clifford Hall next day, worn, anxious, and remorseful, and was shown at once to his father's bedside. The Colonel gave him a wasted hand, and said:

"Dear boy, I thought you'd come. We've had our last quarrel, Walter."

Walter burst into tears over his father's hand, and nothing was said between them about their temporary estrangement.

The first thing Walter did was to get two professional nurses from Derby, and secure his father constant attention night and day, above all, nourishment at all hours of the night, when the patient would take it. On the afternoon after his arrival the Colonel fell into a sound sleep. Then Walter ordered his horse, and in less than an hour was at Mrs. Gilbert's place.

CHAPTER XI.

THE KNOT CUT—ANOTHER TIED.

The farm-house the Gilberts occupied had been a family mansion of great antiquity with a moat around it. It was held during the civil war by a stout royalist, who armed and garrisoned it after a fashion with his own servants. This had a different effect to what he intended. It drew the attention of one of Cromwell's generals, and he dispatched a party with cannon and petards to reduce the place, which he marched on to join Cromwell in enterprises of more importance. The detachment of Roundheads summoned the place. The royalist, to show his respect for their authority, made his kitchen wenches squeak a defiance from an upper window, from which she boiled with great vigour as soon as she had thus represented the valor of the establishment, and when next seen it was in the cellar, wedged in between two barrels of beer. The men went at it hammer and tongs, and in twenty-four hours a good many cannon-balls traversed the building, several many stuck in the walls like plums in a Christmas pudding, the doors were blown in with petards, and the principal defenders, with a few wounded Roundheads, were carried off to Cromwell himself, whilst the place itself was fired, and blazed away merrily.

Cromwell threatened the royalist gentleman with death for defending an untenable place.

"I didn't know it was untenable," said the gentleman. "How could I till I had tried?"

"You had the fate of fortified places to instruct you," said Cromwell, and he promised faithfully to hang him on his own ruins.

The gentleman turned pale and his lips quivered, but he said, "Well, Mr. Cromwell, I've fought for my royal master according to my lights, and I can die for him."

"You shall, sir," said Mr. Cromwell.

About next morning Mr. Cromwell, who had often a cool fit after a hot one, and was a very big man, take him about

FROM THE SISTERS OF CHARITY OF ST. JOSEPH'S HOUSE, EMMITTSBURG, MARYLAND.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup has been used in our institution for several years, and has proved a very efficacious remedy in the numerous cases in which it has been employed, by removing inflammation and otherwise relieving the patient. We keep a constant supply of this valuable remedy in the house, and confidently recommend its use to all who are subject to affections of the throat and lungs.

STATEMENT OF MR. JEREMIAH WINN, OF WORCESTER, MASS.

Four years ago last February I took a heavy cold, which settled on my lungs. At first I was much troubled there. I soon had all the symptoms of Consumption—cough, night-sweats, pain in my left lung, and was reduced so much as to be confined to my bed a good deal of the time. My disease was pronounced to be Consumption by all the physicians I consulted, and they gave me up. I said it was, for the disease is hereditary in my family, three of my eldest brothers died from it. I was sick until I was reduced to a mere skeleton, weighing but 120 pounds. At last, by the advice of my wife, I was induced to use the medicines of Dr. Schenck, of Philadelphia. I had no faith in them, but thought I would try what I was taught, and eventually was entirely cured. I have commenced to take them I only weighed one hundred and twenty pounds, and when I got one hundred and sixty pounds, and I have excellent health all the time. I have never had the least return of my cough. I have recommended my wife, and I make this statement for the benefit of those who are afflicted with lung disease, as I thoroughly believe in the great curative properties of these medicines.

JEREMIAH WINN,

Resides at 57 Irving St.

Worcester, Mass., May 26, 1881.

WHY I HAVE THE UTMOST CONFIDENCE IN DR. J. H. SCHENCK AND HIS REMEDIES.

During the past two years my mother, and another have died of Consumption. I was myself quite unwell most of this time, and when, shortly after their death, I was attacked with cough and severe hemorrhages, I naturally concluded that I was destined to go with the same disease. I immediately consulted a physician, who made a specialty of lung diseases. After examining me, he said that he thought my lungs were sound, and that I would recover. I did not, however, believe what he said, but thought I had another severe hemorrhage. Thinking that my physician had made a mistake in my case, I consulted another doctor. He thought my lungs affected, and prescribed for me for a long time. I got no better under his treatment, but gradually worse. My cough was very bad, my appetite entirely gone; I had severe pain in my right side, and my weight was 115 lbs. I did not sleep more than three hours in a night. My tongue was heavily coated and I had a bad taste in my mouth. I had the headache almost all the time.

Feeling that something must be done, I at last concluded to consult with Dr. Schenck, the physician who, I think, I have good reason to believe, to be the best in the treatment of lung disease, as I went to his office in Boston, and was examined. He found my lungs in a very diseased condition, my liver seriously affected. He told me that I could be cured if I would follow his directions. Of course I consented to do so, and first made sure that the medicine in his office was what he claimed. I got the Mandrake Pills, Seaweed Tonic and Pulmonic Syrup, all at one time, as directed by him, and within one month my most symptoms were gone. I went to see the doctor at his next visit to Boston, which was one month after the first time I saw him, and he said "Only continue with the medicine and you will surely get well." I did so, and to-day I am a well man. I feel and know I was perfectly well, and able to work as usual. Since my recovery I have not had a day's illness; and especially have I had no return of my cough. My doctor at his Boston office. My cough is gone, my appetite is good, I have no headache or pain in my side, and my weight is 160 lbs. I sleep well, and my tongue and system generally healed, so I have no hemorrhages.

These are the reasons why I believe in and recommend Dr. J. H. Schenck and his medicines. He did just what he said he would do for me, and I believe that I owe my life to his skilful care.

STATEMENT OF MRS. ELLEN E. BUTLER, CHARLESTOWN, MASS.

Eighteen years ago I was so sick with what my physicians pronounced Consumption, that neither my friends nor myself thought it was possible for me to recover. I had a terrible cough, lost a great loss of flesh, night-sweats, and had quite severe hemorrhages as often as once a week.

Feeling that I must do something for myself, I began the treatment of my physician, I was induced to call on Dr. Schenck on one of his visits to Boston. After examining me, he said that they were not sound, and that my trouble came from the liver, which was so badly swollen as to be inflamed as to press on the lungs, causing the hemorrhages. He prescribed his Pulmonic Syrup, Seaweed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, which soon gave me great relief, and by their use, for a few weeks, I was entirely cured. I have since advised their use in a great many cases of lung disease, and they have always done all in my case.

MISS ELLEN E. BUTLER,
25 Elm Street, Charlestown, Mass.

A general court martial will meet at West Point January 6.

We must leave the reader to imagine the mixed feelings with which Mrs. Walter Clifford laid her head upon the pillow that night, and we undertake to say that the female readers, at all events, will find this blank in the narrative much better than we could, though we were to fill a chapter with that subject alone.

Passion is a terrible enemy to mere affection. Walter Clifford loved his father dearly, yet for twenty-four hours he had almost forgotten him. But the moment he turned his horse's head toward Clifford Hall, uneasiness and something very like remorse began to seize him. Suppose his father had asked for him, and wondered where he was, and felt himself deserted and abandoned in his dying moments. He spurred his horse to a gallop, and soon reached Clifford Hall. As he was afraid to go straight to his father's room, he went at once to old Baker, and said, in an agitated voice:

"One word, John—is he alive?"

"Yes, sir, he is," said John, gravely, and rather sternly.

"Has he asked for me?"

"More than once or twice, sir."

Walter sank into a chair, and covered his face with his hands. This softened the old servant, whose manner till then had been sullen and grim.

"You need not fret, Mr. Walter," said he; "it's all right. In course I know where you have been."

Walter looked up alarmed.

"I mean in a general way," said the old man. "You have been a-courting of an angel. I know her, sir, and I hope to be her servant some day; and if you was to marry any but her, I'd leave service altogether, and so would Rhoda Milton; but, Mr. Walter, sir, there's a time to court, and a time to attend to business, and you're not the man to neglect your duty."

The last in question was so proud of his beloved home that he left it standing three bullets and all, and built him a house and stables, too.

King Charles the Second had not landed a month before he made him a baronet, and one tenant after another occupied a portion of the old mansion. Two state-rooms were roofed and furnished with the relics of the entire mansion; and these rooms the present baronet's surveyor occupied at intervals when he was inspecting the large properties connected with the baronet's estate.

Mary Bartley now occupied these two rooms, connected by folding-doors, and she sat musing in the quaint window of her bedroom. Young ladies cling to their bedrooms, especially when they are pretty and airy. Suddenly she heard a scurry and patter of a horse's hoof, reined up at the side of the house. She darted from the window and stood panting in the middle of the room. The next minute Mrs. Easton entered the sitting-room all in a flutter, and beckoned her. Mary flew to her.

"He is here."

"I thought he would be."

"Will you meet him down-stairs?"

"No, here."

Mrs. Easton acquiesced, rapidly closed the folding-doors, and went out, saying, "Try and calm yourself, Miss Mary."

Miss Mary tried to obey her, but Walter rushed in impetuously, pale, worn, agitated, but enraptured at the first sight of her, and Mary threw herself round his neck in a moment, and he clasped her fluttering bosom to his beating heart, and this was the natural result of the restraint they had put upon a passionate affection; for what says the immortal Shakespeare, improving upon Horace, so that in England the immortal line is given to Moliere: "Chassez le naturel, il revient au galop."

The next thing was, they held each other at arm's-length, and mourned over each other.

"Oh, my poor Mary, how ill you look!"

"Oh, my poor Walter, how pale and worn!"

"It's all my fault," said Mary.

"No; it's all mine," said Walter.

And so they blamed themselves, and grieved over each other, and vowed that come what might they would never part again. But, lo and behold! Walter went on from that to say:

"And that we may never part again let us marry at once; and put our happiness out of the reach of accidents."

"What," said Mary, "defy your father upon his dying bed!"

"Oh no," said Walter, "that I could not do. I mean marry secretly, and announce it after his decease, if I am to lose him."

"And why not wait till after his decease?" said Mary.

"Because, then, the laws of society would compel us to wait six months, and in that six months some infernal obstacle or other would be sure to occur, and another would be sure to follow. I am a great deal older than you, and I know that whoever procrastinates happiness, risks it, and whoever shilly-shallies with it deserves to lose it, and generally does."

Where young ladies are concerned, logic does not carry all before it; and so Mary opposed all manner of feminine sentiments, and ended by saying she could not do such a thing.

Then Walter began to be mortified and angry; then she cunningly shifted the responsibility, and said she would consult Mrs. Easton.

"That consult her in my presence," said Walter, angrily.

Mary had not bargained for this; she had intended to secure Mrs. Easton on her side, and then take her opinion. However, as Walter's proposal was fair, she called Mrs. Easton, and they put the case to her, and asked her to give her judgment on it.

Mrs. Easton, however, took alarm at the gravity of the proposal, and told them both she knew things that were unknown to both of them, and it was not so easy for her to advise.

"Well, but," said Walter, "you know more than to do, you are the very person that can advise. All I know is that if we are not married now, I shall have to wait six months at least, and if I stay here Mr. Bartley and I shall quarrel, and he will refuse me Mary, and I'll go through again what I did get knocked on the head, or else Mary will pine away again, and Bartley will send her to Madeira, and we shall lose our happiness, as all shilly-shallying fools do."

Mrs. Easton made no reply to this, though she listened attentively to it. She watched by a turn in the wood. When they emerged again into sight of the farm they just caught sight of Hope's back, and Mrs. Gilbert curtseying to him and ushering him into the house.

"Drive into the stable-yard," said Mrs. Easton, promptly, "that I may see your travelling basket, anyway."

She told the servant to put the horse into the stable immediately, and the basket into the brew-house. Then she hurried Mary up the back stairs to her room, and with a sinking heart to find Mr. Hope and her sister.

Mrs. Gilbert, though a simple and unguarded woman, could read faces like the rest, and she saw at once that her sister was very much put by this visit of Mr. Hope, and wanted to know what had passed between him and Mary. This set the poor woman all in a flutter for fear she should have said something injudicious, and thereupon she prepared to find out, if possible, what she ought to have said.

"What Mr. Hope!" said Mrs. Easton. "Well, Mary, you'll be glad. And have you been long home, sir?"

"Came last night," said Hope. "She hasn't been well, I hear. What is the matter?" And he looked very anxious.

"Well, sir," said Mrs. Easton, very guardedly, "she certainly gave us a fright when she came here. She looked quite pale; but whether it was that she wanted a change—but whatever it was, it couldn't be very serious. You shall judge for yourself. Sister, go to Miss Mary's room, and tell her."

Mrs. Easton, in giving this instruction, frowned at her sister as much as to say, "Now don't speak, but go."

When she was gone, the next thing was to find out if the woman had made any foolish admission to Mr. Hope; so she waited for him.

She had not long to wait.

Hope said: "I hardly expected to see you; your sister said you were from home."

"Well, sir," said Mrs. Easton, "we were not so far off, but we did come home a little sooner than we intended, and I am very glad we did, for Miss Mary wouldn't have missed you for all the views in the county."

With that she made an excuse, and left him. She found her sister in Mary's room; they were comparing notes.

"Now," said she to Miss Gilbert, "you tell my every word you said to Mr. Hope about Miss Mary and me."

"Well, I said you were not at home, and that is every word; he didn't give me time to say more, for awakening of her health."

"That's lucky," said Mrs. Easton dryly. "Thank Heaven, there's no harm done; he shan't see the carriage."

"Dear me, nurse," said Mary, "all this time I'm fidgeting to see him."

"Well, you shall see him, if you won't own to having been a night from home."

Mary promised, and went eagerly to Mr. Hope. It did not come natural to her to be afraid of him, and she was impatient for the day to come when she might tell him the whole story. The reception he gave her was not of a nature to discourage this feeling; his pale face—for he had been very ill—flushed at sight of her, his eyes poured affection upon her, and he held out both hands to her. "This the pale girl that frightened me about!" said he. "Why, you're like the roses in July."

"That's partly with seeing of you, sir," said Mrs. Easton, quietly following, "but we do take some credit to ourselves, so; for Miss Mary was rather poorly when she came here a week ago, but, as young folks want a change now and then."

"Nurse," said Mary, "I really was not well, and you have daily wonders for me, and I hope you won't think me ungrateful that I said no home with Mr. Hope."

Hope's countenance flushed with delight, and Mrs. Easton saw in a moment that Mary's affection was co-operating with her prudence. "I thought that would be her first word, sir," said she. "Why, of course you will, miss. There, don't you take any, I mean we'll put up your things and put them in the dog-cart; but you must eat a morsel, both of you, before you go. There's a beautiful piece of beef in the pot, not over-salted, and some mealy potatoes and suet dumplings. You sit down and have your chat, whilst Polly and I get a few trifles ready for you."

Then Mary asked Mr. Hope so many questions with such eager affection that he had no time to ask her any, and then she volunteered the home news, especially of Colonel Clifford's condition, during which she blushed and asked him if he had said anything to her father about Walter Clifford.

"Not much," said Mr. Hope. "You are very young, Mary, and it's not for me to interfere, and I won't interfere. But if you want my opinion, why, I admire this young man extremely; he always kind him; he is a very handsome, upright, manly, good-hearted chap, and has lots of plain, good sense—Heaven knows where he got it!"

This eulogy was interrupted by Mary putting a white hand and a perfect nose upon Hope's shoulder, and kissing the cloth thereon.

"What," said Hope, tenderly, and yet half sadly—for he knew that all middle-aged men must now be second—"have I found the way to your heart?—you always knew that, Mr. Hope," said Mary, softly, "especially since my escapade in that horrid brook."

Their affectionate chat was interrupted by a stout servant laying a snowy cloth, and after her sailed in Mrs. Gilbert, with a red face, and pride unconcealed and justifiable, carrying a dish of smoking hot boiled beef, set in a very dower bed, so to speak, of carrots, turnips, and suet dumplings; the servant followed with a brown basin, almost as big as a ewer, filled with mealy potatoes, whose jackets hung by a thread. Around this feast the hole pugly soon collected, and none of them signed for Russian soups or French ragouts; for the fact is that under the title of boiled beef there exist two things, one of which, without any great impropriety, might be called junk, for this was the powdered beef of our ancestors, a huge piece just slightly salted in the house itself, so that the generous juice remained in it, but the piquant spices, with the mealy potatoes, made a delightful combination. The glasses were filled with home-brewed ale, sparkling and clear and golden as the finest Madeira. They all ate manfully, stimulated by the genial hostess. Even Mary, onto some all her former efforts, and although she couldn't eclipse Mrs. Gilbert, she declared she never eaten so much in all her life. This set poor Mrs. Gilbert's cheeks all aglow with simple, honest satisfaction.

Hope drove Mary home in the dog-cart. He was a happy man, but she could hardly be called a happy woman. She was warm and colored, her eyes twinkled, and he said:

"That's a hair of a dog that has often bitten me."

The wine soon got into his weakened head, and he dropped asleep.

Another draught when he woke," said the doctor, "but from a fresh bottle."

"We'll finish this one to your health in the servants' hall," said honest John Baker.

Dr. Garner stayed there all night, keeping up the patient's strength with eggs and brandy, and everything, in short, except medicine; and no also administered champagne, but at much longer intervals.

At one o'clock the next day the patient gave a dismal groan; Walter and the doctor were both in a moment.

"Good" said the doctor, calmly; "now I'll go to bed. Call me if there's any fresh symptom."

At six o'clock old Baker burst in the room: "Sir, sir, he have sworn at me twice! The Lord be praised!"

"Be quiet, John," said Walter. "Now tell me what disagrees with him most after champagne?"

"Why, Green Chartreuse, to be sure," said old Baker.

Engineer Ed. Quodore, of the Wabash, is indignant because some saloon man sold to his youngest son, last Wednesday, enough whisky to make him drunk. Mr. Quodore is anxious to prosecute the liquor man and will give $5 to any person who can name him.

Dr. Charter and a book agent each wagered this morning that he could reach a certain stone first, both to be blindfolded and to run a wheelborrow. The agent, with his usual ability, "got there," but when the doctor removed the bandage from his eyes he was within five feet of the starting point.

At 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon an adjourned session of the Maumee Presbytery was convened at the First Presbyterian church in Toledo. Rev. G. W. Barr was received from the Presbytery of Fort Wayne, and arrangements were made for his installation as pastor of the Hicksville church January 6.

Superintendent O'Rourke and Ticket Agent McCracken two years ago placed a number of trout in their fish pond at Rome City. They have lately caught some of the same trout which Mr. McCracken says measure seventeen inches in length. A growth of sixteen and one-quarter inches in two years is certainly as well as could be expected.

The state attorney general, by request of Governor Porter, decides that three publications of sheriff sales are sufficient and that the sale must be published in the county paper having the largest circulation, for twenty-one days exclusive of the day of sale. That notice of a sheriff's sale to occur February 14, published in a newspaper January 24 and 31 and February 7, is sufficient under the statute. This ruling was brought out in the case of the Putnam Press.

The probabilities seem to be that the January thaw will begin in December. About eight inches of snow are now on the ground—some of the under layers packed and frozen—and if the thaw is complete and sudden a flood may be expected. Warmer weather will probably follow close upon this fine winter day, how warm remains to be seen; then will come the "spotted weather," a cold day, then moderate weather.

Consideration of the Robinson divorce case was resumed in the circuit court this morning. Dave Robinson, the defendant, was called to the witness stand and told the story of his domestic troubles in a characteristic rambling manner. He denied all the allegations of adultery advanced by his wife and Judge O'Rourke refused to grant the woman a divorce. Dave looked at his wife and the wife looked shy at Dave. They kissed, embraced and started home in a sleigh as affectionate as a bridal couple. This happy ending of an apparently bitter feud sent a ripple of laughter over the court assembly.

AMUSEMENTS.

Dickson's Sketch Club.

Dickson's company closed their engagement last night to small business. The party give the cleverest kind of an entertainment and are as jolly as the law allows. It is a fact that no dramatic company can profitably stop here two nights.

MADAME JANISH.

Next Wednesday evening this great actress will play at the Academy and THE SENTINEL expects to find the house packed. After the matinee performance by Janish, in Baltimore, recently, when she appeared as Camille, a great many of the ladies in the audience waited outside the theater to see the actress when she left her dressing rooms. As Janish came near them, they made a precipitous rush toward her, and from handshaking got to kissing her. It was with some difficulty that she managed to escape from this osculatory demonstration of her lady admirers, and reach her carriage.

DATES.

The next attraction at the Temple Opera House is "Mugg's Landing." This absurdity is booked for next Friday evening and although only launched upon the stage at the opening of the present season, is already a big success and gives promise of enjoying a long run. It is more than is claimed for it. There is not a weak point or superfluous line in the whole construction. It is chaste and charming, with sudden transformations from the sublime to the ridiculous. Tragedy and comedy are deftly interwoven, and thrilling situations are the jewels in a crown of the most enjoyable nonsense.

Manager Woodworth seems anxious to give patrons of the Academy a season of laughter. He has booked the "Rag Baby" for next Thursday evening. The play is very funny and the critics praise it.

A great source of amusement here now is the treacherous roller skate. The West End and City rinks are well patronized and by the best class of people, too. These resorts are popular and deservedly so.

The Santa Claus social and concert at Union hall, given by the Arion society, will be a delightful affair, Sunday evening, December 28. The Christmas tree will be well filled with most gorgeous presents, which will be given away on that event. Admission 25 cents. 24-3

If you want an Oil Portrait, try Jones. $15 to $30 each. See samples.

Don't go elsewhere for your Holiday Presents, as you can find just what you want at my store. Thanking the ladies for their liberal patronage during the past season, I remain, Yours truly, FRANK J. VOIBOL.

Cunning, deceitful, treacherous and sly are the attacks of malaria. It lurks in stagnant ponds or works its way up through imperfect plumbing from unwholesome drains. Myers, of Fairfield, Iowa, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters in the best iron preparation I have known in my thirty years of practice."

CHRISTMAS GREETINGS.

Old Lucky No 8.

Kaag Bros. would respectfully call your attention to the fact that they have the finest and best selected assortment of Crockery and Glassware ever shown in this city. In this connection they would suggest that, when puzzling yourselves what to buy for a Christmas present in which both ornament and utility will be combined, that you drop into No. 5 East Columbia street and see our choice notions there displayed. Natives of Fort Wayne and brought up in the business they have made the people's wants in their line a lifelong study and do not think they will be accused of egotism when they remark that they have got it down fine and feel that any person favoring them with a call will say so. Remember they take pleasure in showing goods and giving prices and make it a point to be able to say that none go away dissatisfied. tf

Catarrh Cured

Catarrh is a very prevalent disease, with distressing and offensive symptoms. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives ready relief and speedy cure, from the fact it acts through the blood, and thus reaches every part of the system.

"I suffered with catarrh fifteen years. Took Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am not troubled any with catarrh, and my general health is much better." I. W. LILLIE, Postal Clerk Chicago & St. Louis Railroad.

"I suffered with catarrh 6 or 8 years; tried many wonderful cures, inhalers, etc., spending nearly one hundred dollars without benefit. I tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and was greatly improved." H. A. ARMEY, Worcester, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. T. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.
